Deborah - Prophetess? Judge?

Williamson, Paul
Deborah – Prophetess? Judge?
Paul Williamson
P&A 2017 elective
Seminar questions

1 What is at stake if the traditional interpretation of Deborah’s unique role as judge is abandoned? Does it really matter what role she exercised – prophet, judge or both? Why/why not?

2 Clearly some women, like Deborah, exercised some kind of a ‘prophetic ministry’, sharing authoritative messages from God to his people. What issues might this raise for a complementarian viewpoint? How would you respond to those who take Deborah’s prophetic role to support egalitarianism?

3 To what extent, if any, were the respective roles of Deborah and Barak gender-related? How might the respective responsibilities of this man and woman influence our attitude to male and female leadership in a modern church context?

4 To what extent, if any, does Judges 4–5 exemplify a complementarian model of male-female ministry? Is this affected in any way by the precise role that Deborah occupied? Why/Why not?